

IN THE WOMAN'S WORLD

LOUD TALK AND ATTRACTION

The other day several young women stepped aboard one of the street cars, and although their appearance as to dress was nothing unusual they were talking so loudly that all the passengers aboard the car were immediately made aware of their presence. So many of the young people of today affect loud voices and the only excuse given by spectators is that they are anxious to attract attention to themselves. Of course loud actions anywhere reflect on one's parents although often times they are not in the least to blame. Many of the young girls get into the habit of being loud when trying to imitate someone, whom they think worthy of being imitated. It is natural for the girl in her teens to meet and make a semi-sodder of some one of maturer years who is not always the best of company and who generally instills the wrong kind of ideas into the heads of the adoring young people. Only a short time ago there was a young girl, who in some way attracted the notice of a woman of wealth and was "taken up" by her. During the year or more that the woman remained in the island married fancies were instilled into the girl's mind. Her parents were in moderate circumstances and were not in a position to afford the little things which the girl's wealthy friend bestowed upon her. Her unselfish mother who was always looking for a new form of pleasure for her daughter hesitated a long time before telling her that her companionship of a very wealthy friend was not good for her. Each day that the young girl visited her friend she became more discontented with her home environments. She was taught the art of the rouge pot which in her own home was gazed upon with horror, she was taught to think that the clever thing for a girl to do was to attract the attention of as many strangers as possible, because the woman seemed to think that the more attention one gained the more popular one became. The climax finally came when the young lady arrived home long after the dinner hour and entered the house saying that she was going to the theater with a young man whom she had met that day at one of the hotels. Her mother was astonished, and in spite of the fact that it hurt her as much as it did her daughter she firmly insisted that the young lady break her engagement. The next day when she was in town with her daughter the young girl commented on the scenery in an unusual loud tone of voice. When her mother spoke of it the little girl replied that it was quite the fashion to speak so that those about you could hear. These new ideas were easily fastened in the mind of the child but it was some time before she became her natural self again. Some mothers let the actions of their daughters go too far and then are unable to correct them. It seems natural for the young girl to imitate, and unless her associates are of the refined type and of quiet nature she is apt to be a sort of chameleon type, reflect either the desirable or the reverse.

If the girls who are used to attracting attention to themselves will stop to think a moment they will realize that the girl who is quiet in her dress and actions will call forth far more admiration.

FEET AND LEGS OF WOMEN ARE BIGGER

Athletics and Outdoor Life the Cause, Say the Buyers of Textile Goods

BOSTON, Sept. 14.—Outdoor sports and athletic exercises have so developed the American woman of today that she has bigger legs and feet than her mothers and her aunts, according to the American Wool and Cotton Reporter of this city, the official organ of the textile industries of the country.

As convincing proof of the truth of this assertion, the trade papers assert that the big hosiery mills in New England have given orders for the construction for new looms for the production of hose h sizes larger than have ever been placed on the counters for millday's inspection, criticism and final purchase.

The new looms, the paper asserts are the result of quiet but urgent "tips" given to the textile mill officials by the hosiery buyers. "It is these buyers too," add the paper, "who, of all others, have the best opportunity of noting the rapid and marvellous progress being made of late years toward the development of the real ideal figure. This is the natural result of our women resorting to every outdoor sport and athletic exercise which were for so long enjoyed only by the other sex. Forget manufacturers, it is said have been similarly "tipped off" by the buyers in their line.

WOMEN CONDUCTORS ON PHILADELPHIA CARS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 15.—The Philadelphia Rapid Transit company is experimenting with women conductors on its new pay-as-you-enter cars. Yesterday two women were detailed to the job.

Although no official of the corporation would say what the experiment indicated the superintendent of the division where the girls were tried is reported to have been pleased.

The chief aim of the company is to do away with as many of the causes of labor difficulties as possible. It is estimated that the company will save one-third on the wages formerly paid to conductors.

FISHER TELLS ENGINEERS TO GUARD WATER-RIGHTS FOR ALL

Notable Address Made Before Association at Annual Banquet

That water-rights in Hawaii are receiving the attention of Secretary of the Interior Fisher was evidenced last night when the Secretary, speaking at the annual banquet of the Hawaiian Engineering Association, told the fifty or more members and almost an equal number of guests present that water-power is the great power of the future and must be guarded carefully for all the people.

Without referring directly to the involved question of public and private water rights in this Territory, Secretary Fisher made it plain that the national government, and his own department as immediately in charge, are taking the liveliest interest in the conservation of water throughout the United States.

"There is no question that water power is the power of the future," declared the Secretary, "for scientists have not yet learned to harness the solar system or the tides or the winds. It is to the white coal that runs over our falls and is not consumed nor wasted, but returns to us again in rain from the clouds, that we must look for the great source of our future energy."

"Much of the priceless resources of the United States in waterpower has been seized by private enterprise and the public deprived of its just rights, but much more is being developed, and it is the problem of so adjusting the relations that capital will not be discouraged and that the people will be given their proportion of the benefits, that is one of the hardest before the Department of the Interior today."

Secretary Fisher also outlined briefly the policy that is being developed in his department—the policy of regarding water rights as national assets and yet so developed that the immediate stream or country in question receives the first benefits. He outlined the policy as cooperation between the State and the Nation, saying that the long-distance transmission
